Beneficiary Complaints

Under Medicare law, Quality Improvement Organizations (QIOs) review complaints about the quality of care that Medicare patients receive. The complaints come from Medicare patients and/or their representatives. In reviewing a complaint, the QIO looks at the services a patient received and decides whether those services met standards of health care that are commonly accepted by physicians and others in the medical community.

Quality-of-care complaints may involve more than one concern, due to the following:

1. More than one quality-of-care concern in a single setting
2. The same quality-of-care complaint for a single patient episode of illness involving multiple settings and/or providers
3. Or more than one quality-of-care concern involving more than one setting and/or provider

For example, a Medicare beneficiary complaint related to a hospital stay might include several different quality-of-care concerns or a beneficiary who was hospitalized and then moved into a skilled nursing facility or other outpatient hospital setting might have the same quality-of-care concern occur in each type of setting. Consequently, for a specific setting or provider type, the number of quality-of-care concerns confirmed by the QIO may exceed the number of beneficiary cases reviewed.

Hospital Admission and Continued Stay Concerns

Under Medicare law, QIOs review the need for inpatient hospital care and certain ongoing outpatient treatments. They help determine whether a patient received care in the proper place or “care setting.” This review may take place either before, during or after a hospitalization or treatment. Once a patient or his/her representative asks the QIO to review a “Hospital-Issued Notice of Noncoverage,” or HINN, the QIO conducts a review and issues either a denial notice or a notice explaining that the care would be, or is, covered. If a hospital issues a HINN and the beneficiary has financial liability for care rendered but the patient does not request a review, the QIO automatically reviews the case after the fact in what is called “retrospective review.” In all reviews, the QIO staff looks carefully at the patient’s medical record to decide if an admission or continued stay or care is/was needed.
